

The final project meeting started with dinner at a lakeside restaurant. I hadn’t attended before, so it was exciting to get to know all the partners.

Next morning we had a guided tour of historic town, which was very interesting, since I learned, among other things, that Graf Zeppelin is a son of Constance. In town hall, following a speech of a city official, we saw a video compiled by the partners of Wrexham College, it gave me an insight in the previous work of the group. Later on Susanna Gratzl and Maria Hirtenlehner, from the International Centre for Cultures and Languages in Vienna, held a workshop on Cross-Cultural Exchange between Police and Migrants called Tandem, worthy being adopted by all european countries. The best part for me was to become acquainted with the „Silent Way of teaching”, with which I had the chance to learn some turkish.

The last afternoon we went to beautiful Reichenau by boat. After visiting churches, abbeys and monasteries we enjoyed Bodensee fish and fresh vegetables harvested right on the island.
